

PROMAT UPDATE – 22 May 2020

GOOD AVAILABILITY OF PROMAT PRODUCTS

Dear Customer,

As we are all aware the impact of lockdown has put severe pressure on the supply chain of many manufacturers in the construction sector. As the industry moves to reopen this will have an effect on the availability of key products, and potential delays on site.

The safety of our colleagues has been central in maintaining the production of Promat fire protection boards during lockdown. Social distancing, and other safety measures, were adopted early to ensure that manufacturing could continue. By ensuring continuity of supply, Promat products have been available to support a number of key UK construction projects throughout this period.

There is continuing good availability of key products including PROMATECT®-250, used for the encasement of steel columns and beams and mezzanine floor protection; and SUPALUX®, the industry-leading multi-purpose passive fire protection brand. In particular we are seeing increased demand for PROMATECT®-250, which provides a high degree of strength, dimensional stability and fire performance to structural steel, and our customers should be confident in the continuity of supply when recommending Promat boards.

We will continue to support our customers with the supply of Promat products, and should you require any help with a project our technical support team is at your service.
